

Kestrel Bio — Board prep, Q3

Prepared for the October board meeting. Circulate to directors only.

Corporate development

We are thinking about buying a microfluidics company for just under four hundred million, mostly cash with some stock, and holding back some of it because of a patent fight. Diligence is being run by the corp dev team with outside counsel.

Commercial

We are splitting the commercial team into two pods: enterprise accounts running the autoloader, and self-serve registry API customers on the per-seat plan. The change takes effect at the start of next quarter.

Next year we want to stop charging per seat and start charging per plate when the autoloader goes generally available.

Research update

Cohort four dosing started this week, testing the intermittent schedule proposed after cohort three: three days on, two days off, versus the continuous dosing used in cohorts one through three.

Hepatotoxicity appears above 12 mg/kg. The screening assay itself remains robust, with a Z-factor comfortably above 0.5.

Appendix: data room

Questions about the data room go to dana@kestrelbio.com.

Warehouse: `postgresql://kestrel:8fh39dkw0slq@db.internal:5432/compounds`